SCULPTURE IN CONTEXT

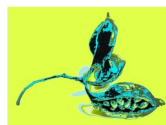

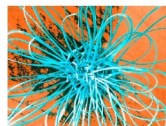

Experience art beyond the museum walls in the National Botanic Gardens.

Let the exhibition map guide you around these wonderful gardens where you will discover sculptures everywhere; flowering in the herbaceous borders, hanging from trees, floating amongst the water lilies and appearing from the undergrowth. With more than 150 works popping up in every corner, you can expect the unexpected, an absolute treasure trove waiting to be discovered!

As summer turns to autumn, nature and the elements will play their part in transforming the gardens so that every visit will provide a different experience. Your perception of each sculpture will invariably shift with the changing season; blue skies, bright sunshine, drizzling rain or dappled sunlight providing an ever changing backdrop to the art.

Covering 50 acres and ranging in size and materials, these works of art represent the richly diverse character of Irish and International contemporary sculpture

Life size works and large installations are displayed throughout the gardens, ponds, Great Palm House and Curvilinear Range of glasshouses. Smaller pieces are exhibited in the gallery above the visitors' centre.
